Museums are hot, I find them very sexy.

I walked by the BIGmountain, the city roads where coming out here, so many people, chatting about anything, now it's time for skate, next week, heavy metal. week before PARTY . All want to eat cake, together, loads of them. It's like being in a movie. Switching, channels. I get a mess, there's so many people. they all here on the cover of New York Times. The most fancy place in the world. Forget about Brooklyn, it's crazy, to look the world up. Pictures. To make the world. And then my thoughts take a piss on me, Think about it that we are ghosts, who other ghosts is using to meet each other again, in a game where there's loads of runners, obstacles, situations of complex surviving. And then you all of a suddenly finds out that it doesn't matter because the ghost world is as real as everything. Models.

When people walk by me they don't see me, they scream when they notice. Sneak up. As an animal. I walked by the BIG man, this is a local scam. Like all other scams. It's archived. Now it's the humans, then it's the machines and then the machine humans. everybody building, every bird is screaming, birds please sing me pretty songs, melancholia, they eating each other. The crows are good, they are smart, names, call them names, archive it.

See, I grow up with the army throwing these cannon shots twice a day, I couldn't help but wonder why would they actually do it. To show they still here.. What about now, they moved out, they not there anymore. The queen is still there, she's surrounded. And the churches still ring their bells, for how long, not all burned up. The Bible names still there on the cups of Starbucks, when people buying there coffee. Concept America, personal shopping, I wonder how long it will last. Decades. Flip back, Austria got a nice look like the chocolate packages, all these soft landscapes with a spread of small houses. Milky Way trip, with big Smiles Mira
