

CROOKED MIRROR

Easy-going. I'm in Beirut, drinking my third Negroni, I just lost 50.000 lira. I'm in red lipstick. Its revolution times. Broke up with my boyfriend only ones for a three weeks traveling, that's good. Just a little drama after all.

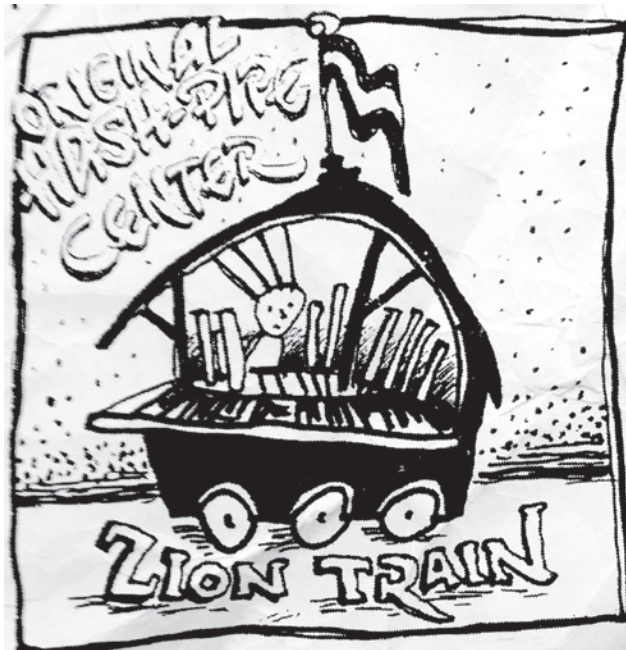

Dorothy says, take care of the luxuries, necessities will follow. Today I encountered worlds second largest diamond and it's shinning rainbow in the glass of the vitrine. There was a rare crystal called Rachel and a stone cut In slices with some real psychedelic features. The director of the museum showed me stones from Greenland and a new biggie they just got out of Russia. I found the crystals made out of plaster(gypsum) really funny. They are only made if hot boiling water gets to the minerals and it all needs to cool down very slow, the gypsum then can get extremely hard and start crystallize. It's miraculous, all these shinning stones is a rare incident, one lucky reaction with the conditions surrounding. Rare little devils. Like us.

With love Mira

illustration: Asia Plum

XXIX

KÆRE GÆST
DU ER MEGET VELKOMMEN PÅ
CHRISTIANIA
HUSK BLOT:

INGEN HÅRDE STOFFER

INGEN VÅBEN

INGEN VOLD ELLER TRUSLER

DET ER DA NEMT...

